A BLARSTED BRITISHER UPON THE KENTUCKY HORSES AND THE KENTUCKY WOMEN—IMPRESSIONS IN LEXINGTON, Correspondence of the I enden Telegraph.

Lexington, KT., Sept.
The average British reader—to employ a very fashionable phrase of the day—has, I atrongly suspect, never heard of Lexington, in the State of Massachusetts, he has, perhape, heard over-much, in many a Fourth of July cration, as the precise point where the "first gun" of the revolutionary war was fired, from a Brown Bess musket. Mr. Daniel Webster has all borsewomen, and when any one of them fainting on your hands or having a touch of hydretca. They have their opinions, and give them to you with frankness; but they are on the old disputed subjects of feminine curvicultions, albeit patriotic, paths upon which their strong-minded sisters are plunging ahead with a longer and more impetuous stride. You can see the genicalty, the freshness and joyous-ness of these girls the moment you entered the "first gun" of the previous paths upon which their strong-minded sisters are plunging ahead with a longer and more impetuous stride. You can see the genicalty, the freshness and joyous-ness of these girls the moment you entered the "first gun" of the previous paths and yet look as if they could, at need, take very good care of themselves. They are all horsewomen, and when any one of them fainting on your hands or having a touch of hydretica.

They have their opinions, and disputed subjects of femining envised the paths a long disputed subject of femining envised to you with frankness; but they are on the old disputed subjects of femining envised to you with frankness; but they are on the old disputed subjects of femining envised to you with frankness; but they are on the old disputed subject of femining envised to you with frankness; but they are on the old disputed subject of femining envised to you with frankness; but they are on the old disputed subject of feminine envised to you with frankness; but they are on the old Something to say on that head. Kentucky is now a prosperous and populous State. In the very center of the rich Mississippi valley, claiming, for fertility of soil, and auccess in certain branches of agriculture, and the raising of stock particularly, not to be tebind any other State in the Union. For many years I have been used to hear these vannts from my Kentucky friends, who, I am bound to confess, are not without reason for their profound self-satisfaction. By far the finest portion of Kentucky is the "Bluefinest portion of Kentucky is the "Bluegass region," as it is called—though why Kentucky friends, who, I am bound to confess, are not without reason for their profound self-estisfaction. By far the a finest portion of Kentucky is the "Bluegars region," as it is called—though why I could hardly say, if I trusted my eyes; for the grass is of as honest a green asany. I reland could produce. But I am assured that at certain seasons of the year—say in May or November—there is a blue tings about the grass which gives some excuss for the strange designation. The notable point about the grass, however, is not its color, but its extraordinary abundance and succulence, and the fact that it is the natural growth of the soil. The notable point about the grass, however, is not its color, but its extraordinary abundance and succulence, and the fact that it is the natural growth of the soil. The country is of limestone formation. Originally, I suppose, there was a very thick primeval forest in Kentucky; but most of the stranged growths are oak, walnut and hickory; and—unlike the case of Virginia and the South—there is no undergrowth whatever. The foreste, in a word, are grand and beautiful; and there is about twery farm an air of cultivation and finish which, added to the genuly undulating character of the country much more than any other part of America. Nor is this resemblance leasened by the frequent herds of cattle, all of fine breed and appearance, the Devon cattle, though there are some of them hereaboutls, and a sogod many in the East. The Kentuckiam seffirm that, by careful breeding and attention to stock, they have now the best in the world; and the Begrass region is certainly sought they purchasere of the beat stock, coming from all parts of the United State, and over from Eegland.

Which entirely prevents the ingress of air into oil wells while the tubing is No. 22 Spring St., being drawn.

It is a well-known fact to oil well operators that upon wells where gas pumps are used, it is becessary to preserve as nearly a perfect vacuum as possible, and that no air should be let into the well at any time when it can possibly be avoided; conequently whenever the tubing le drawn from a well, it is the cause of great injury to it, as the stirlings box being then necessarily opened, the sir immediately runkes back between the tubing and casing into the well, go ng into the oil rock and gas vents, and cont quently causing the oil and great or runh back to a great destance. It almost always takes several days after pumings weeks, and quite frequently wells have been almost completely runned by the air teng thus let in white drawing tubing. The Buck Suction Prevertive is attached to the studing box, and works in such a way that it completely shurs up the space be ween the studing soy, and works in such a way that it completely shurs up the space be ween the studing so box and tubing so effect unly that not a pe ticle of air can get through it any time while the tubing is being drawn and replaced.
